

The internet is a great place for ensuring your voice is heard. Whether through engagement with politics or running your own campaigns, there are tools to help online.

Engaging Politically

The first step to engaging politically is finding your elected representative. QR Code 1 takes you to 'TheyWorkForYou' which allows you to find out about your assembly member (or Westminster MP). QR Code 2 takes you to a collection of resources around politics, including sites about voting and election leaflets.

Code 1

Code 2

Code 3

Starting Petitions

There are lots of sites for creating petitions. However, the largest are the government's own petition site (where petitions with enough signatures get debated in parliament, QR Code 3) and Change.Org, an internationally acclaimed petition site (QR Code 4). Why not see if there's any you want to sign, or set one up on an issue you feel strongly about.

Code 4

Using social media

There are many different ways you can use social media to become an activist. You can set up twitter campaigns or Facebook pages to support your cause. Many campaigns use 'Twibbon', which places a campaign logo over your profile photo. QR code 5 links to Twibbon – take a look.

Code 5

